POPPY DAY FUNDS PROTECT VETERANS

Funds which enable the American Legion Auxiliary to aid war veterans in distress come largely from the contributions made by those who wear memorial poppies on Poppy Day, Mrs. R. D. Robinson, Rehabilitation Chairman of 104 Auxiliary Unit, said today as she helped complete preparations for the observance of Poppy Day here May 28.

"The dimes, quarters and dollars dropped into coin boxes of the Auxiliary's Poppy Day volunteers are divided two ways," Mrs. Robinson explained. "Half goes to our child welfare work and half goes to our work for veterans. These funds are available throughout the year for relief of distress among veterans and veterans' children.

"The bulk of the money stays right here in the treasury of our local Auxiliary Unit and is expended locally. We buy the poppies from the Poppy Department of the Auxiliary which has them made by disabled veterans at Kecoughtan. There is no overhead for promotion or management and, since all of our Poppy Day workers are volunteers, every penny contributed goes for the purposes for which it is given."

Wheat Must Meet Minimum Standards Of Health Dept. to Qualify For Price Suppor

By Dr. J. L. Maxton,
Agricultural Economist, VPI

Farmers who want to put wheat under the 1955 price support program must be prepared to meet specific standards of grain sanitation other than factors such as insect infestation, foreign matter, and moisture content.

This year, the Food and Drug Administration has resumed a wheat sanitation-enforcement program including minimum of rodent contamination or insect damage.

In line with this program, the Commodity Credit Corporation has revised the regulations governing the wheat-price-support program.

(1) 1955-crop wheat must meet the Food and Drug minimum sanitation requirements to be eligible for price-support loans.

(2) 1954-crop wheat under loan and resealed 1954-crop wheat must meet the minimum sanitation requirements upon delivery to CCC at the end of the loan period. Otherwise, the "settlement" value will be the price at which the wheat is sold by CCC to the highest bidder for feed, or uses other than food. Producers may redeem their loans if they wish.

(3) 1954-crop wheat which has been under price-support loan, or covered by purchase agreement must meet the minimum sanitation requirements to be eligible for "reseal" loans.

(4) 1955-crop wheat which is covered by purchase agreements will not be eligible for delivery to CCC if it fails to meet the minimum sanitation requirements which include:

(a) If it contains more than two rodent pellets per pint, or comparable amounts of other contamination, or

(b) If it contains two percent or more, by weight, or kernels visibly damaged by insects.

The great bulk of the wheat which leaves United States farms is clean well above these minimum standards.

Most farmers already handle and store their wheat carefully. Only a small fraction of the wheat sampled failed to meet the minimum sanitation requirements. The trouble lies with a relative few exceptions, where carelessness or a combination of adverse circumstances have been guilty.

The new provisions should not work a hardship on producers or disrupt wheat marketing. Reasonable care and the observance of standard clean-grain-handling practices will insure that the wheat is acceptable for the price-support program—and for unrestricted movement in regular channels of trade for food use.

The Extension Service is emphasizing clean grain and can furnish valuable suggestions.

A Clean-Grain Check List

(1) Check storage space to be sure it is clean and free of contamination. Spray interior.

(2) Be sure the bin is rodent-, bird-, and moisture-proof. Repair leaking roofs, eaves, and ventilators.

(3) Take steps to prevent insect infestations. Apply protective spray or dust mixture to the bin, or fumigate during suspect frequently; if necessary.

See your county agent for suggestions on clean-grain operations. Check with your local committees for minimum requirements.

At the end of our column last week we had a phase that recalled the famous expression of "what the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina. So far as I have heard, the following story of that remark:— Back in the palmy days of the 1840's, the North Carolinians boasted that they had drinks "in between drinks," while South Carolinians replied that they had no 'between drinks." It is said that a crime was committed in South Carolina and the alleged criminal escaped across the line into N. C. John H. Hammond was Governor of S. C., and when up the matter of extradition with Gov. John Morley Morehead, Governor of N. C. Some difficulty was encountered, and finally the two men met at the state border, at Charlotte. Gov. Hammand made an eloquent plea, and finally Morehead replied: "It's been a long time between drinks"— a look of cordiality was restored, and the matter settled to the satisfaction of all.

We were eating at a famous dining room recently and picked up a menu saw to us. On the table was a glassene lined bag with plenty room for bones, meat scraps, anything else you wished to take to the family dog. Boy, don't business folk think of everything.

This year, people who are still using one-color cars are secretly pitied by their neighbors as almost visionary as people who take pride of their own children. —From Kansas, Kansas, Blade.

Nobody nothing hurts a woman more than having to put glasses to apply her lip- —National Safety News.

Anyone who wonders why American boys always regarded George Washington as its ideal soldier has only to read a letter written to a friend by the general just after he had resumed Commander of the Continental Army 180 years ago (June 1775). This passage alone is enough to justify Washington's title of the Cincinnatus of America, a man who fought humbly, as a duty, as a boy, and who returned with relief to peace and retirement:— "I have been called upon by the unanimous voice of the Colonies to take command of the Continental Army; it is an honor I by no means sought for. It is an honor I wished to decline, as well from an unwillingness to quit the peaceful enjoyment of my family, as from a thorough conviction of my own incapacity and want of experience in the conduct of such momentous a concern; but the unanimity of the Congress, added to the call of political motives, left me no room for a choice. May God grant, therefore, that my acceptance of it may be attended with some good to the common cause, and without injury from want of knowledge to my reputation. I can answer but for two things: a firm belief in the justice of our cause, close attention to the prosecution of it, and the most perfect integrity." —Quote.

Down in front of the news office! Yesterday afternoon a truck drove up in front of our office, loaded with fish with fish to stock farm ponds in the county. Some twenty men had signed up for fish for their ponds. A good thing, and we want to give our blessing to the project. But it caused us to recall a story told by R. L. Burke, of a similar project came up here many, many years ago. Word got out that the state would furnish fish for ponds and streams, so Appomattox turned in on the deal. A telegram came back that 20,000 or so fish would arrive on the next train! The town hall knew no bounds. All the people were aroused and every kind of wagon and conveyance was mustered, loaded with barrels, tubs or whatever would hold a little of water! They even hoped to get just a few of the fish for eating purposes. Imagine their surprise when the train pulled in and instead of minnows fish, they handed off two small pails!

Fishing is already a top sport and pastime around here. The farm ponds are paying off at the table as well as conservation projects.

Which brings us right down to the last line of another column.

Mayberry Starts Life Term After Conviction of Murder

The dramatic trial of Frank Mayberry, 47 year old railway welder's helper, of Evergreen, accused in the shot-in-the-dark killing of Dr. David A. Christian, III, on the night of Feb. 25, came to an end here late Saturday night, when a jury summoned from Cumberland County brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, with punishment fixed at imprisonment in the state penitentiary for life.

Mayberry was taken to Richmond Monday to begin his term.

Decision has not been made by his attorneys, W. F. Watkins, Jr., and J. B. Wall, Jr., of Farmville, as to an appeal of the conviction nor has a decision been announced by the Commonwealth as to prosecution of a second indictment, charging the murder of Mayberry's brother-in-law, Jack Tucker.

The trial began Friday morning and ended as midnight approached Saturday. The court room was packed during most of the two days, and the case attracted wide publicity.

High-water mark of the trial came when Mayberry took the stand to testify, and in a calm, quiet manner declared, "I feel mighty bad about it. For myself, and for the doctor's family, and my people."

The Story of the Trial

At 10:05 A. M. Friday, the sheriff, D. T. Robertson, brought the defendant, Frank Mayberry, into court, before a crowded courtroom. At 10:06, the sheriff opened court, and at 10:10, there was a delay awaiting the arrival of George Ab-
